

ABSTRACT

In general, in one aspect, the invention includes a method that includes providing, to a user of a control device, an indication of a value currently associated with a preset, and simultaneously providing an indication of a possible new value of the preset.